

Jason and Cagatay coordinated an innovative event on PhD education at EuroVIS - the Eurographics Conference on Visualization.

You, Me & the VIS PhD was Part workshop, part panel, part stand-up, part therapy session it was intended to bring together those in the visualization community who are studying PhDs and who have studied PhDs to make connections, share experiences and establish best practice.

The workshop involved discussion groups, the panel involved a stellar cast of old hands participating in a "7x7 shoot-out" - answering 7 questions in 7 minutes about their diverse experiences in PhD study, supervision and other forms of education in: Canada, the USA, Germany, Switzerland, Chile, France, India, Bangladesh, Japan, Austria, Iran, Denmark and the UK. This was rich, entertaining and informative.

We hope that everybody left the event:

- more connected - having a new contact with whom to communicate;
- more informed - with ideas to improve PhD Education, and;
- inspired - to prioritise actions that solve & improve things

Initial informal feedback suggests that we did pretty well - it was certainly a lot of fun.

And you never know, we might make a few positive changes to support and improve PhD education in visualization as a result.

FIGURES

CAPTIONS

A timeline of PhDs - our seven 7x7 participants

Design Study legend Michael Sedlmair (University of Stuttgart) reflected on his PhD

The Panelists prepare with coffee. In a wooden cage. In a car park.